karaoke parties, anime conventions, emoji costumes, e-scooters, new architecture and liquid food.

They reveal to me the forces that shape the present, ways of relating in a post-digital world and glimpses into the immediate, uncertain future. If it wasn't for art I might be called a conspiracy theorist.

My research and fascinations manifest in performative video essays and participatory, multimedia happenings.

What do the following events have in common?

- the World Economic Forum
- the japan anime manga night
- an anti globalization protest

They all took place in or around the same building.
The Congress center of Davos in Switzerland.

This video essay connects these stories through their shared backdrop. It analyzes the shift of Swiss anime conventions from uncommercial DIY spaces into consumer paradises and how the political elite might have a lot in common with nerdy outsider communities.

they were relatively noncommercial places

In Davos, suddenly everything had a price tag.

Miracle Mics KARAOKE (2023 - on going)

In calendar week 50 of 2023, invitations to the vernissage of the group exhibition “there will be karaoke after this” were sent out via E-Mail, Telegram and WhatsApp. The title of the opening kept its promise. The Students studio was transformed into a lounge landscape facing a stage. At 9pm the presenter gave a short introduction while dressed as a laughing emoji. He told the audience that in order to perform, one had to fill in a form and wait to be announced.

Miracle Mics Karaoke was an attempt to create an environment that allows to feel the joy of singing and dancing with the computer instead for profitable algorithms.

Currently I’m still trying to gather as many artifacts as possible that were generated by the event. Until now I collected Instant camera pictures, forms, smartphone videos, tiktoks and dating app profiles.
